About the song:

Simple Gifts is one of 12,000 songs composed by the Shakers during the middle of the nineteenth century. Thought to be written by Shaker Elder Joseph Brackett, the song was both an instruction for life as well as an instruction for dancing, the words "bowing," "bending," and "turning" indicating dance moves. In 1944 Aaron Copland popularized the melody in his ballet Appalachian Spring. In the seventies it was further popularized by Judy Collins who performed it nationwide. By the eighties, the song had become a part of American heritage; opera singers performed it at President Reagan's second and President Clinton's first inaugurations, and it was sung at President Nixon's funeral. The Music Educator's National Conference has named it among a handful of songs every American should know, ranked alongside the National Anthem, Battle Hymn of the Republic, and Home on the Range.
